

Airbus Wins Contract for Continuing Lakota Helicopter Fleet Support

A UH-72A Lakota helicopter attached to the U.S. Army 112th Aviation Regiment takes off from Naval Air Station Key West's Boca Chica Field in Key West, Florida, on March 3. U.S. NAVY / Mass Communication Specialist 2nd Class Nicholas V. Huynh
GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas – Airbus has signed a follow-on contractor logistics support contract with the U.S. Army to provide spare parts, material, and engineering support for the Army's entire UH-72A and UH-72B Lakota fleet of 482 utility and training helicopters. The fleet includes several UH-72As on loan to the U.S. Naval Test Pilot School.

The contract includes a six-month base and 4.5 option years, with a potential total value of more than $1.5 Billion. Airbus will provide support across 67 Lakota sites in the U.S. and overseas. This includes National Guard bases in 43 states, and Fort Rucker in Alabama, where the UH-72A performs the Army's Initial Entry Rotary Wing mission.

The CLS contract with the U.S. Army is the largest helicopter performance-based support contract managed by Airbus worldwide.

"Airbus has provided exceptional product and support services in the UH-72A for nearly two decades," said Col. Calvin Lane, U.S. Army Utility project manager. "This contract underscores the Army's trust in the aircraft's capabilities, and we look forward to the continued support this contract provides to the UH-72 fleet."

The contract will be managed by Airbus U.S. Space & Defense. Headquartered in Arlington, Virginia.